An Arendtian Articulation of the Revolutionary Uprising in Tunisia

The Power of Action and Vindication of Social Justice

Supervisor: Prof. Paolo De Stefani

Candidate: Kathryn Marie Allison

A.Y. 2012/2013
ABSTRACT

The current thesis asks the question ‘how can the revolutionary uprising in Tunisia be interpreted through the lens of Hannah Arendt’s political thought, and what can these historical events offer in terms of insight and critique into Arendt’s theoretical premise on the human condition, on revolution, and on articulation of the public realm?’ To answer this question, this thesis employs Arendt’s political thought as the foundation of the analysis, to which the theoretical inputs of other scholars form a comparative viewpoint in which to add depth to Arendt’s political theory in light of the events that have unfolded in Tunisia. In reading the Tunisian revolutionary uprising through an “Arendtian lens”, this thesis reveals that Arendt’s political thought on power and the human capacity for political action remains prophetic in explaining the revolutionary events, however this thesis also reveals fundamental shortcomings in Arendt’s dismissal of social and economic matters as constituting both a revolutionary force and an essential element of the public realm. This thesis concludes that through expanding Arendt’s narrowly defined conception of the public realm to be inclusive of issues of social justice, a more holistic image of the public realm can be reached that corresponds to the emerging political culture in Tunisia.
TABLE OF CONTENTS

PRELUDE AND INTRODUCTION

CHAPTER ONE – ARENDT’S POLITICAL THEORY

1.1 – INTRODUCING HANNAH ARENDT: THE “POLITICAL THINKER”
1.2 – ON THE HUMAN CONDITION
  1.2.1 – THE ARTICULATION OF THE PUBLIC REALM
  1.2.2 – ON POWER AND VIOLENCE
1.3 – ON REVOLUTION
  1.3.1 – ON REVOLUTION, FREEDOM AND VIOLENCE
  1.3.2 – RESTORATION, IRRESISTIBILITY AND NOVELTY
  1.3.3 – HISTORICAL NECESSITY
  1.3.4 – THE SOCIAL QUESTION

CHAPTER TWO – THE TUNISIAN REVOLUTIONARY UPRISING SEEN THROUGH AN “ARENDTIAN LENS”

2.1 – AN ARENDTIAN TALE OF THE UPRISING IN OVERVIEW
2.2 – TUNISIA: FROM COLONIAL RULE TO TYRANNY
2.3 – BEN ALI’S REGIME OF ISOLATION
2.4 – REVOLUTION AND THE ROLE OF SOCIAL MEDIA AND NETWORKING
2.5 – ARENDT’S THEORY OF POWER AND THE OVERCOMING OF ISOLATION

CHAPTER THREE – THE QUESTION OF THE SOCIAL IN REVOLUTION

3.1 – AUTHORITARIAN RESILIENCE AND SOCIAL MALAIS: THE TRIGGERING OF THE REVOLUTIONARY UPRISING
3.2 – THE SOCIAL QUESTION IN REVOLUTION: OVERCOMING ARENDT’S BINARY OF THE FRENCH AND AMERICAN REVOLUTIONS
3.3 – OVERCOMING ARENDT’S CRITIQUE OF HISTORICAL NECESSITY
CHAPTER FOUR – THE QUESTION OF THE SOCIAL IN THE PUBLIC REALM

4.1 – OVERCOMING ARENDT’S CRITIQUE OF THE RISE OF “THE SOCIAL” ➤ 57

CONCLUSION ➤ 61

BIBLIOGRAPHY ➤ 74
An Arendtian articulation of the revolutionary uprising in Tunisia: the power of action and vindication of social justice

Allison, Kathryn Marie

https://doi.org/20.500.11825/481
Downloaded from Open Knowledge Repository, Global Campus' institutional repository